

The 2022 CopperDog race maps are available for free in georeferenced PDF format using the Avenza Maps application. This allows users to download the overview and individual-stage maps for the CD25, CD80, and CD150. Users can then view their relative location to the trail and trail crossings in real-time using a smartphone.

Once the maps have been downloaded, this application does NOT require cellular service or WiFi to work.

Downloading Avenza

Avenza Maps is available through the Google Play Store [Android] and Apple App Store [iPhone].

Search for "Avenza" in your app store, the icon will appear as pictured here [1]:

Download the application to your phone. It is free of charge.

Adding the CopperDog Maps

Once you have the Avenza application downloaded, open it and go to the "Store" tab on the bottom.

Enter "copperdog" as the keyword and press "Search". [2]

The 2022 CopperDog maps should now appear as results.

Once you see the results, press the "Free" button [3], then press it again when it changes to "Download?". This will add the map to your "MyMaps" tab.

Do this for all the CopperDog maps that you will need. Once they are loaded into "MyMaps" [4], simply open the one that you want to use. Your relative location will be displayed on the map as a blue dot.

2: Search "copperdog" in the Store tab.

3: View the maps in the My Maps tab.

Note: GPS accuracy is subject to environmental conditions such as tree cover or anything that might impede connection to GPS satellites. While it is usually quite accurate, your location on the map may change abruptly and show as incorrect. This is rare, and will correct itself after a short time.
